John Wilson

ABOUT THE ARTIST: Signs were pointing in the right direction when they led artist John Wilson to venture into wildlife painting.

Born in Sisseton, SD, Wilson worked 25 years for Stein Signs and Displays with offices in Watertown, SD, as a designer and artist. As proof of his talents, Wilson won the International Award for sign display.

But it wasn't until 1976 that he decided to paint wildlife. His first illustration, depicting a swan in flight, placed second in the South Dakota Migratory Waterfowl Stamp contest.

Wilson won his first wildlife art contest in 1979 when his painting took top honors in the South Dakota Pheasant Restoration Stamp contest. In 1981 he came back and again won the contest and then again this year.

Wilson topped off his accomplishments by capturing the ultimate prize for a wildlife artist when he won the prestigious Federal Duck Stamp Contest in 1981 with a painting of a ruddy duck.

Wilson's only formal art training came from a short course in architectural drafting. This, plus his natural abilities and diligence, has been enough to establish him as an accomplished wildlife artist as evidenced by his rendition of the ringneck pheasant on the 1986 South Dakota Pheasant Restoration Stamp, plus the 1986 First of State Waterfowl Restoration Stamp.

Wilson continues to reside in Watertown, SD where he paints wildlife as a fulltime profession.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM:

In 1986, South Dakota Legislature passed a bill creating a new Waterfowl Restoration Stamp, which will feature art selected in a contest run by the South Dakota Ducks Unlimited Council in cooperation with the Game, Fish and Parks Department.

John Wilson's painting of Canada Geese was selected for the first year of the continuing series of a 3 year program that will feature geese. Wildlife artist Rosemary Millette's painting of Snow Geese will appear on the 1987 Restoration Stamp. The strong local market should make this series very collectible.

The South Dakota Stamp Prints have been published annually since the first Duck Stamp Print in 1976. Ducks were used as the subject for the first three years on the stamp/print. The duck stamp and pheasant stamp were combined in 1979 into one stamp required of both upland and duck hunters in South Dakota.

This First of State Waterfowl Restoration Stamp will again represent a mandatory requirement to purchase 1 South Dakota Pheasant Stamp and 1 Waterfowl Restoration Stamp plus the Federal for a total of 3 stamps, to hunt waterfowl in South Dakota.

Rosemary Millette

ABOUT THE PRINT AND PROGRAM: Two Blue Phase Geese resting in a cornfield will appear on the 1987 South Dakota Waterfowl Restoration Stamp Print. The winning design by Wildlife Artist Rosemary Millette was chosen in a contest run by the South Dakota Ducks Unlimited Council in cooperation with the Game, Fish, and Parks Department. Rosemary's painting was selected for the second year of the continuing series of a 3 year program that will feature geese. Most Waterfowlers find the familiar Blue Goose west of the Mississippi and along the Gulf of Mexico from Florida to Texas. The Blue Goose is smaller than the White Snow Goose and the feather coloration is more subdued with the addition of brown and grays. Rosemary's ability to create a beautiful painting with accurate detail and a strong sense of habitat will surely add to the collectability of the series.

ABOUT THE ARTIST:

Rosemary Millette's work reflects a lifelong pursuit of art. Since the age of five, she has been drawing and painting, with animals being her favorite subject. After working for seven years as a commercial artist, she was able to leave her job and once again pursue wildlife painting. Although her work exhibits a realistic approach, her primary goal is to give a spirit of life to the subject. Often the viewer's attention is first captured by the eyes of the animal she paints. She and her husband travel extensively, exploring the countryside from the prairie sloughs to the Rocky Mountains. Her work reflects this diverse range of interest with paintings of animals ranging from songbirds to moose. In 1985 she appeared at the National Wildlife Art Show held in Kansas City as a Featured Artist and was honored with "Best of Show" awards for the Bird of Prey and Non-game Water Bird categories. She also won the South Dakota Pheasant Stamp competitions in both 1983 and 1985, along with the 1985-86 South Carolina Duck Stamp contest.
