THE LINCOLN FUNERAL CAR
SOUVENIR
42ND NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT
G. A. R.

Wasselder

...Post Card...

ON the 14th of April, 1865, (exactly four years after the surrender of Fort Sumter) when everything looked hopeful and the war was over, President Lincoln was shot and a day later passed away, and the nation was plunged into mourning. The car illustrated on this card had recently been built for the President and his Cabinet. It became his funeral car, and on April 21st, after most impressive obsequies, this car (bearing the President's remains,) with six other cars and the locomotive all heavily draped with black, slowly moved out of Washington amid a vast crowd of silent and sad spectators. History does not record a more touching spectacle than the passing of this funeral train through the most populous states of the Union. At every point along the route vast throngs stood with uncovered heads while the train passed by. In city and country buildings were draped in mourning and flags drooped at half mast. On May 3rd the train reached Springfield, Ill., and on the following day, as a chorus sang "Peace, Troubled Soul," the casket was closed forever. Myron H. Lamson, the father of the Lamson Brothers, an enlisted mechanic, served as assistant foreman during the construction of this car and the remodeling to receive the President's remains. The photograph has been in the family for 43 years and now that a united nation reviveth of Lincoln and everything connected with his death, we thought it appropriate that we put this picture to the brave men to whom we are greatly indebted.

*To Most Truly, Beloved Wife
Dear Madam*

I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously in the field of battle. I feel how restless and fruitless must be any word of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering you the consolation that may be found in the shared sorrow of the Republic. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and above all else, that the bright memory of the loved one who died, and who lives in the hearts of those who love him, may be a source of comfort and inspiration to all who are called upon to make so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

*Yours very sincerely and respectfully
Abraham*
