Bicentenary of Bass & Flinders-Bass Strait
and Tasman

The circumnavigation of Van Diemen's Land (later named Tasmania) in 1791-92 by George Bass and Matthew Flinders proved the existence of Bass Strait and finally established that Tasmania was an island. These findings had significant impact on the sailing time and safety of ships sailing from Europe to Australia. Linked by a traditional compass, the stamps show Flinders' sextant and telescope, a map of Tasmania from the mainland, and excerpts from a letter written by Bass in 1789 and from Flinders' journal.

of paintings and tapestries in Australia and has also had exhibitions in Paris, New York, Washington and Hong Kong. His most recent exhibition, at the Australian Galleries in Sydney in May this year, was highly successful, finding an enthusiastic audience among a younger generation.

A series of seven Coburn tapestries, The Creation (1969), hangs in the John F Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts in Washington, while two large-scale tapestry curtains grace the theatres of the Sydney Opera House.

decorated Christmas trees to America and it became popular in England and the colonies after Queen Victoria introduced the custom at Windsor Castle. Trees ranged in size from a table top variety to full size. Artificial trees became popular when invented in the 19th century although many people still prefer a 'live' tree grown specially for Christmas, which has given rise to a specialised industry employing thousands of people. In Australia some people use eucalypts instead of the more traditional fir tree. Erecting Christmas trees in public places was popularised during World War II and has continued as a tradition since.

All Christians, except those belonging to the Armenian Church, agreed on 25 December as the official date of the nativity and extended the festivities until 6 January. On this day the three wise men, bearing gifts for the future king of the Jews, discovered Him in a Bethlehem stable. 'Epiphany', which means 'manifestation' or 'showing', is the name of the celebration commemorating this special event.

The text was hand-written in a cursive Latin script on fine vellum, a type of animal skin. Prayers to the Virgin Mary, to be recited at the eight canonical hours of the day, form the basis of the textual devotions. This beautiful manuscript is illuminated with forty-one detailed paintings or miniatures, the work of a celebrated artist known as the Maitre François.

Details of two miniatures from the Wharnclyffe Hours, depicting the Adoration of the Magi and the Flight into Egypt, appear on the stamps.

Baron Sir Ferdinand von Mueller, KCMG, MD, LLD, PhD, FRS was honoured on a stamp in 1948 for his extraordinary achievements in Botany. The stamp was engraved and designed by F.D. Manley of Note Printing Branch and depicted von Mueller from a photograph in the National Herbarium, Melbourne. The spray of leaves represented Yellow Stringy Bark (Eucalyptus Muellieriana), one of the thousands of Australian species classified by von Mueller.

Appointed Government Botanist of Victoria in 1852, von Mueller set about exploring most of Victoria and parts of South and Western Australia, the Northern Territory and Tasmania. He was credited with discovering and tabulating more flora than any other living person and was regarded as a world authority on botany.

Notable amongst his achievements were his work on the initial production of eucalyptus oil in 1852 and propagation of Australian saltbushes as valuable fodder plant for arid regions overseas.

The stamp was recess-printed on paper watermarked multiple small crown over C of A and issued in sheets of 160, perf. 14 3/4 x 14, comb.

Centenary of Bass & Flinders - discovery of Bass Strait and Tasmania

George Bass and Matthew Flinders began their circumnavigation of Van Diemen's Land (later named Tasmania) in October 1798 and completed it in January 1799, proving the existence of Bass Strait and establishing that Tasmania was an island. These findings had a significant impact on the sailing time and safety of ships sailing from Europe to Australia.

Bass and Flinders arrived in NSW in September 1798. While exploring the southern coast of Australia to Westernport, Bass became convinced a strait existed to the south of the continent, between Van Diemen's Land and the mainland. Governor Hunter named it Bass Strait in his honor and requested that he and Flinders undertake an exploratory mission to ascertain if this was the case. This they did in the Norfolk, a sloop built at Norfolk Island.

The centenary pair of stamps incorporate similar elements - journal text, Flinders' sextant, a compass image and a map of Van Diemen's Land and Bass Strait.
