TRINIDAD & TOBAGO

PRINCES TOWN
CENTENARY
1880-1980

The H. M. S. BACCHANTE arrived in Port of Spain on 7 January 1880 bearing Prince George and his brother Prince Albert. The Princes were paying a Royal Visit to last 15 days during part of their 3 year cruise. As the guests of Governor Irving, they were lavishly entertained, visiting many parts of the island and enjoying the hospitality of some of its leading citizens. On 21 January, towards the end of their stay, the Princes visited the Mission of Savanna Grande. Arriving by locomotive the Princes alighted and proceeded to St. Stephen's the Anglican Church where they planted two Poui trees. In honour of the occasion the Mission town was renamed Princes Town.

PALAUAN COMMEMORATIVES

First Postal Issue

The Republic of Palau, an archipelago in the Western Pacific, assumed control of its own post system on November 1, 1982, in terms of a unique agreement with the United States Postal Service. On March 10, 1983 Palau released its first postal issue, a block of four 20c commemorative stamps as its first postal issue. The issue is a double commemorative of the Palau-U.S. Postal Agreement and Inauguration of the Palau Postal Service. The first day of the issue took place in Palau's capital Koror, and concurrently in New York City, in special ceremonies marking the twentieth anniversary of the United States Stamp Dealers Association.

Assumption of postal independence is a major step toward Palau's self-government. Part of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands mandated by the United Nations in 1947, Palau is working with the United States to achieve full control of its own internal and foreign affairs under a "free association" compact with the U.S. The Constitution of Palau, or Belau as known in the native language, came into effect January 1, 1981.

Justly proud of their independent spirit and their own history and traditions, the Palauans prefaced their Constitution with a resounding Preamble. The first two sentences of that Preamble form the central design of two of the stamps. They are placed in a checker-board arrangement, with two stamps that depict traditional Palauan designs taken from the front view of a communal "bai" — meeting house for the government of a Palau village. The Koror bai from which the designs came were destroyed in a typhoon. The blue border running vertically across the top and bottom of all the stamps is recurrent in many Palauan crafts.

The front view drawing of the bai pictured on this commemorative panel was rendered by Charlie Gibbons, Palau's favorite artist. It appeared on the front cover of the Belau Art Exhibition catalog prepared by the Palau Museum for the South Pacific Festival of Arts held in Papua, New Guinea, in 1980.

Sea and sky blend into one in the more than 200 small islands that form Palau's territory. Palau's flag is symbolic of the islands' image — a golden-yellow moon set slightly off-center in a field of sky-blue. The Palau flag and the USA flag appear on the lower panel of each stamp, in tribute to continuing ties between the two nations. The commemorative legend is inscribed on the two flags and under the name of the Republic of Palau on the stamp denomination.

The stamps were designed by American artist, Neil W. They were printed in multicolor lithography by House of Great Britain, in panes of 40 from sheets of 160 subject to per for the stamps measure 28.45 x 42.58mm. The numbers in the sheet selvege represent the offset printing.

PALAUAN COMMEMORATIVES

First Birds Issue

E. Kraemer

Palau is exceptionally rich in avifauna, especially when compared with the rest of Micronesia and most other Pacific islands. This is due to Palau's close proximity to the great continental islands of Asia, such as Papua New Guinea, the Philippines and Indonesia, from which plants and animals of those regions as well as from the Asian mainland and Japan get to Palau. Many birds are endemic to Palau, including the four perching land birds depicted in this (Palau's second) postal issue.

Palau's colorful birds abound in numbers and variety, represented by some 38 different families either as breeding residents or as migrants. Among resident land and forest birds are other white-eyes, fruit doves, morning birds and fantails, as well as broadbills, starlings, cicada birds, wood swallows, bush warblers, swiftlets, honeyeaters, bitterns, gallinules, kingfishers, rails, ducks, jungle fowls, pigeons, owls, nightjars, cockatoos, parrots, mannikin finches, night herons, reef egrets and megapodes.

The breeding seabirds found in Palau are widespread in tropical waters — terns, shearwaters, cormorants, boobies, frigatebirds and tropic birds. Migrants include winter visitors from Japan and the Asian mainland and a few species that visit Palau during the southern winter. Among the many that come to or through Palau twice annually are wagtails, barn swallows, sea gulls, ducks, cuckoos, plumed and cattle egrets, some species of terns and a host of shorebirds. Notable species among shorebirds found in Palau are herons, raptors and passerines. Some shorebirds come all the way from nesting grounds in Siberia.

Because of over hunting, habitat destruction (especially during and after World War II) and other environmental problems, at least ten different Palau bird species are in danger of extinction and listed as Endangered Species by Federal and Trust Territory statutes. Included among these is the resplendent Palau Fantail which is depicted in this set and thrives in forests throughout the Palau archipelago.

Bird hunting has been a traditional Palau activity, and Palau bird hunters had developed unique skills and hunting implements, such as live dove decoys and bird blinds. In the early 1900s Elizabeth Kraemer, artist-wife of the great German ethnologist Augustin Kraemer, documented Palauan bird designs and hunting activities in her sketches for her husband's definitive ethnographic study of Palau. One of those sketches is shown on this panel. Today Palau leads the way for intelligent environmental protection laws. A Palau District law prohibits the hunting or killing at any time of all Palau birds except kingfishers, jungle fowl, cockatoos, parrots, purple swamphens and Micronesian pigeons. The Micronesian pigeon, a bird popular in Palau for its food and legendary values, is also protected by laws allowing it to be hunted only during November and December.

H. Douglas Pratt, a superb contemporary artist and notable ornithologist — one of the few with actual field experience in Palau — painted the four birds of this stamp set from real specimens expressly for this issue. When Dr. Pratt, who is a research associate at the Louisiana State University Museum of Natural Science, visited the islands to make field observations from 1976-1979, he also recorded numerous bird vocalizations, the first ever of Palauan birds. His tapes are deposited in the Library of Natural Sounds, Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology. His bird paintings for Palau are his first for stamps, and he is much sought after for contributions to Natural Geographic Society, Audubon Society and other field guides. Collectors will doubtless look forward to future stamps from Palau that promise to carry Dr. Pratt's art.
