Inside Rear Cover

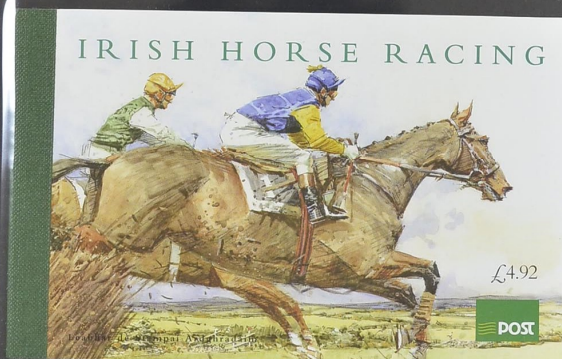

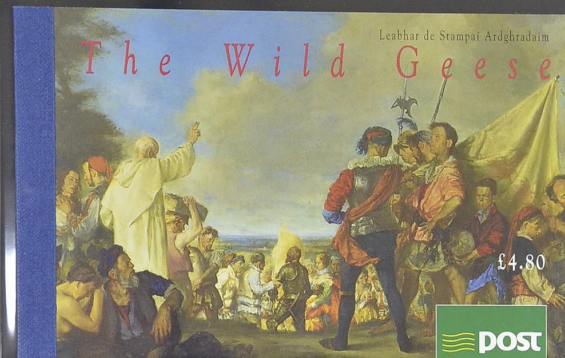

Photograph of a group of artists, including Goggin, inside a cafe in Paris Avenue. Irish painters who travelled to Britain and other parts of France were part of a very large movement, including painters from Britain, U.S.A., most European countries and so on.

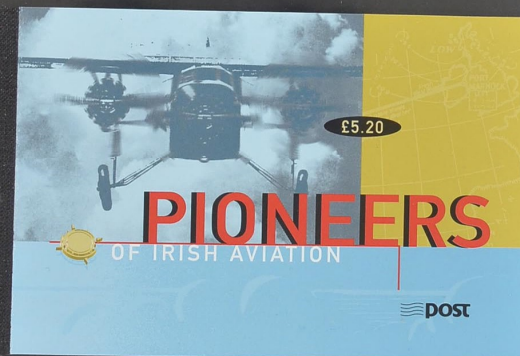

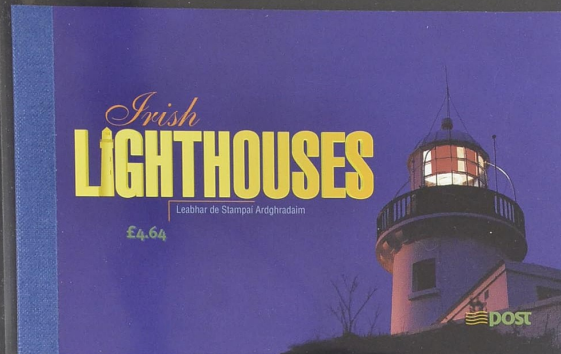

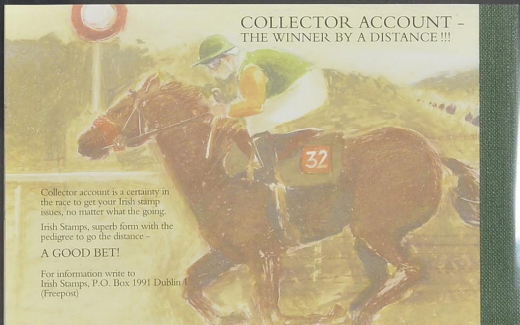

All of the paintings are reproduced by kind permission of the National Gallery of Ireland, with the exception of No. 7 Towards Night and Winter, which is reproduced by kind permission of the Hugh Lane Municipal Gallery of Modern Art, Dublin.

Of these paintings all are by Irish painters except No. 2 Harlequins Resting by Léon L'Hermine, a plain air painter who along with Botton, Rastier-Lepage and Cairn had an influence on many Irish painters and on Van Gogh.

Photograph on inside rear cover reproduced courtesy of Musée d'Art et d'Archéologie, Neuchâtel, Switzerland.

MAUREEN O'HARA BLAIR

Born in Dublin in 1920, Maureen FitzSimons qualified at the College of Music London. She trained at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin before starring in over fifty-two motion pictures, including 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame' and 'The Quirky Man', changing her name to O'Hara. She married Brigadier General Charles F. Blair in 1947 and helped him run Antilles Airboats. She was the first woman in the U.S. to be president of a scheduled airline. She has recently returned to making movies. She engages in many fund raising functions for various charities and remains one of Ireland's finest ambassadors.
