THE FLIGHT OF APOLLO 13

APRIL 11th, 1970 - As 2:13 PM America's third lunar expedition streaked away from earth on their voyage to the moon, Astronauts Lovell, Haise and Swigert, last minute replacement for Mattingly, reported all was going well as they coasted toward a point a quarter million miles away.

APRIL 13th, 1970 - Apollo 13 was in serious trouble today when an explosion in the service module cut-off power to 2 of the 3 electricity-generating cells. The moon mission cancelled the Astronauts continued toward the moon.

APRIL 14th, 1970 - The crisis came tonight as the Apollo crew rode the crippled commandably "Odyssey" around the backside of the moon. The engine of the lunar lander "Lunarion" was then fired, sending them on a correct course back to earth. Failure to fire the engine at the precise moment would have meant certain death to the Apollo 13 crew.

Jim Lovell Tom Mattingly Fred Haise

APRIL 17th, 1970 - The troubled-plagued space voyage of Apollo 13 ended today with a safe pinpoint landing in the South Pacific after a last minute course correction to avoid overshooting on re-entry. - NINE minutes of the 104.00 spin-down, helicopters from the recovery carrier USS The Sigsbee were overhead.
