...two cultures:
...since most
...Christians, their wedding
...usually in white (representing
...purity) and the bride carries a bouquet of
...flowers at the ceremony.

The four sets of Korean traditional costumes depicted in this book have also illustrate the various cultures of Korea, spanning the period of the Confucian Joseon Dynasty (1392). An official's wedding includes a guaze for an official robe, with an insignia, embroidered on the breast and official uniform leather boots. The bride's robe also reflects her social position. She wears either a Haenim, an embroidered court robe, or a Hennim, a ceremonial robe. Her hair is beautifully adorned with ribbons and other accessories. wooden wig or a coronet decorated with jewellery.

In the set of stamps, the bridegrooms featured wear various types of Dutch-style while the brides don the Heerloo or Wetsien as well as one stamp ($1.10 stamp) depicting the formal dresses worn under the bride's Wonsan and the groom's Dallgong. These are worn by the newly-married couple for a while after their wedding. The bridegroom has a black horse hair hat called the Got, and a coat, the Durumagi, over pants and jacket. The bride has a yellowish green jacket, called the Jogori, and a red skirt, the Chima.

The stamp designs also feature different backgrounds to convey different themes common in Korean culture. One of them shows the sun, moon and five mountains – depicting health, longevity and matrimonial harmony. Another has a peony in the background – for wealth, prosperity, longevity and purity. The mandarin duck, representing love and conjugal harmony, and, the duck – symbolising success in life and fame – are the themes in the other two designs.

All of the stamps in this job designed by Korean University Yun Yeo-whan, a specialist in painting.

The Happy Moment of Elizabeth's Engagement to Philip, at Buckingham Palace on July 10, 1947

POSTAGE STAMPS COMMEMORATING

ROYAL SILVER WEDDING

QUEEN ELIZABETH II AND PRINCE PHILIP

Royal Silver Wedding Set of British Antarctic Territory, the Empire's scattered outposts on the bleak fringes of the ice continent at the South Pole. Prince Philip visited many of them on the royal yacht "Britannia" early in 1952. The stamp borders feature seals and penguins.

Elizabeth and Philip Pledge Their Troth, With an Empire as Well-Wishers

Finally the moment so long looked forward to by the young couple, when their troth would be made public and official, arrived on July 10, 1947, six weeks after Elizabeth's return from South Africa. During that interval, all the Prime Ministers of the Empire's Dominions around the globe had been consulted and had enthusiastically given their approval to the match. Within a few hours of the announcement, over 7000 telegrams of congratulation poured into Buckingham Palace. They came, not only from heads of state and titled nobles, but from ordinary people throughout Britain who were made happy by their Princess' happiness, lifting momentarily the weary weight of war and sacrifices, and post-war austerity and shortages, that had for almost a decade pressed down on them.

Now began a feverish round of preparations for the wedding, which was set for Wednesday, Nov. 20, 1947, in the national shrine of Westminster Abbey. No marriage of an immediate heir to the British throne had taken place since that of Edward VII as Prince of Wales to Princess Alexandra of Denmark in 1863, over 80 years previously; and many rules of protocol and ritual had to be gone over and brought up to date for this new occasion. And in the midst of all the bustle, Elizabeth took time out to assist her beloved governess, Marion Crawford — "Crawfie" — in her own wedding which came in September, to a London bank accountant. The King presented "Crawfie" with a small house and garden on the edge of London, as wedding present and token of affection and gratitude from the Royal Family.
