UNITED STATES

The UNITED STATES OF AMERICA (50 States: 3,615,210 sq. mi.; pop. 179,323,210; cap. Washington, D. C.). After severing their ties with Great Britain in 1776, the 13 original American colonies founded a republic, the United States of America. From such a small beginning, the nation now comprises 50 states and is the richest, most powerful country in the world. This land is noted for its vast abundance in raw materials, its people for their skill in invention and the development of mass production. Dedicated to the rights of the individual, the United States is the leader of the free world and its strongest bulwark against the spread of communism.

The UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND (93,852 sq. miles) is a European country. Its capital London is the largest city who live by importing raw materials and exporting manufactured goods. Their survival upon the freedom of the seas. They have gradually and peacefully converted the Empire into the remarkable BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS, a voluntary association of independent countries held together by common allegiance to the British crown and mutual benefits in matters of trade and defense.
