WORLD SERIES BATTING FOES
MICKEY MANTLE • HANK AARON
Mickey Mantle is today the greatest slugger in baseball. He has led the American League in homers, runs-batted-in, and hits, and was its MVP in 1956 and 1957. He hit 52 homers in '56, making him a real threat to Ruth's record. Hammerin' Hank Aaron is probably the most talented hitter in the majors today. He unleashes surprising power, too. He led the NL with 200 hits and with a .328 batting average in '56. Hank was the MVP last year.

The young southpaw is the possessor of a blazing fastball. Steve is a daring pitcher who challenges every batter. Last season, he paced the Redbirds' staff in strikeouts as he whiffed 168 batters. His fourteen wins were second only to Dick Hughes who posted 16. Steve is still learning the fine art of pitching and is in the process of developing several other pitches to go along with his fine hummer.

Between these two fence busters 172 runs were chased across the plate and 61 homers belted into the stands last year. Hank, the Most Valuable Player in the National League in 1957, is a terror to opponents when World Series time rolls around. In the '57 Fall Classic he belted a torrid .393 with 3 homers and 7 Runs Batted In. Last year he posted a .333 mark against the Yanks. The only season that Hank hit less than .300 was in '54 when he fractured his ankle late in the season and was sidelined for the balance of the campaign. Eddie wields one of the most powerful bats in baseball. In 7 years with the Braves, he has averaged 36 homers per season. In addition to belting the ball out of the park, Ed can work pitchers for walks and in '55 led N.L. in receiving Bases on Balls. Eddie is the best bunter on the Braves.
