Occupied Nations

HONORING
THE PHILIPPINES

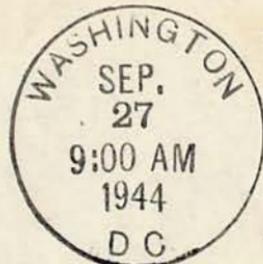

August 13, 1898, Manila surrendered to the American Forces and Treaty of Peace was signed. Thinking they were to receive immediate freedom, the Filipinos were disappointed—though cession of the Islands had been only upon U. S. payment of $20,000,000 to Spain.

Jose Rizal, a sincere reform leader, first deported, had later been executed during Spanish reign. But Aguinaldo, who had been bought off by Spain and left the Islands in 1897, returned and raised a revolt against the United States. Though captured in 1901, it was some time before peace was established. And Aguinaldo has remained an agitator through the years.

At length disheartened by our efforts in their behalf, we voted a 10-year probationary period and Quezon was elected President.
