

The American Civil War, also known as the War Between the States or War of the Rebellion, was fought between April 12, 1861 and April 9, 1865. Over 620,000 people lost their lives, more from illness and injury than combat. Arguably about state's rights and succession, the major reason was slavery which the largely industrial "Union" had abolished [or never used], while the largely agricultural Confederacy advocated the use of slavery. Originally the capitol was in Montgomery, Alabama, but it moved to Richmond, Virginia.

Petersburg, Virginia, was important because it lay less than 30 miles south of Richmond. By rail it distributed soldiers, foodstuffs and supplies to Richmond as well as cities to the south. It also had direct access to the Atlantic Ocean via the Appomattox and James Rivers. Union headquarters were in City Point, Virginia, now Hopewell, just seven miles to the east.

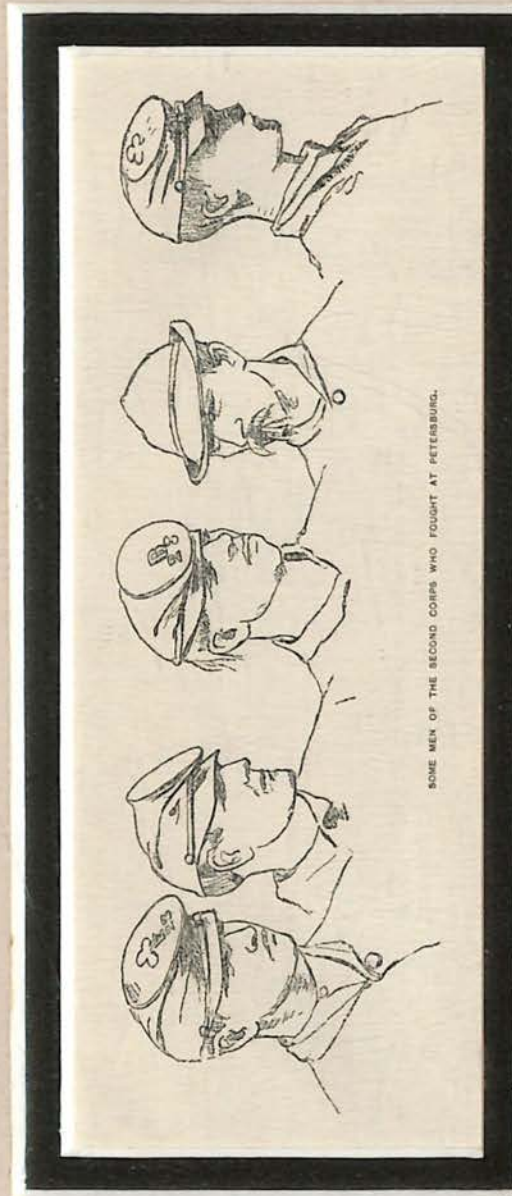

Union troops used mine explosives as a technique to subdue Petersburg. Unfortunately, the crater formed by the explosion meant that Confederate troops could fire at advancing Union troops, resulting in about 5,300 casualties. The "Battle of the Crater" was on July 30, 1864, and resulted in Union surrender. The ultimate nine month "siege" [June 9, 1864, to March 25, 1865], a logistical precursor to the trench warfare in World War I, resulted ultimately in at least 65,000 additional casualties.

The seventh-largest city in the Confederacy, Petersburg was key to Union plans for the defeat of the Confederate capitol city of Richmond (mainly due to the railroad network). Battlefield sites are located throughout the city and adjacent areas. Petersburg had one of the oldest free black settlements in the state at Pocahontas Island. The Confederacy issued fourteen postal stamps. Many covers included these stamps, or U. S. stamps, or in some cases postmaster provisionals [including Petersburg], postage due, free frank, or other stamps, as well as some stampless covers, which were postally used. Less common were "adversity" covers [which used any available substitute, the most desirable to collectors being reused wallpaper], cover of truce, steamboat [or blockade] or other designations.

This collection includes most of the examples of paper "relics." It includes stampless covers, stamped covers, United States and confederate stamps, provisional stamps, transitional Union usage, adversity covers, "dual" covers, blockade letters, soldier letters and documents, prisoner and patient correspondence, patriotic covers, currency, and other "ephemera."

Dear Wife,

I rec'd yours written on the 13th ult. Friday last just as we were shipped on board the Mattabesett and was glad to get it. We are just arrived at Petersburg about a mile & half from the city. We are stopping a few minutes waiting for orders where to tent, so I thought I would take a minute's opportunity in writing your letter, gave me a little encouragement of the baby getting better. My dear where there is life, there is hope, and I hope your next letter will bring me news of his improving. Now S.A. I am where the two great armies is concentrated and I am of opinion there will be something done before long, either in our favor or against, and I have reason to have confidence on our side. The whole of the 6th Corps of Sheridan's Army is ordered to Petersburg. Our regiment belongs to that Corps. There is 3 divisions in a corps and I am in the 1st. We arrived today, 2nd D[ivision] tomorrow, and the 3^d the day after tomorrow. I guess I will tell you what makes a corps. There are ten company's in a regiment, 3 regiments in a Brigade, 3 Brig. in a division, 3 divisions in a Corps, besides the artillery and cavalry. Gen. Sheridan had command of 3 corps in the Shenandoah Valley, the 6th, the 8th, and the 19th Army Corps, and Sheridan would have rather the other two corps had gone than the Sixth.

Wednesday the 8th inst. Well now we have pitched our tents behind the breastworks in front of [the] enemy. I guess it is about a mile to where the enemy [are] laying. Nothing of any consequence going on. Yet once in a while I hear the sound of a heavy gun and picket firing. Let me know if you have applied for your State Bounty in your next letter. I am glad you have some one with you. It will not be so lonesome. Write soon and direct as before.

From your Husband,

Camp near Petersburg, Va., June the 24th, 1864

Dear Friends at home, it is with pleasure that I try to let you hear from me, and I am well and do hope this will find you well. We are under fire every day. We are in easy range of the Rebs. They pop off and once in a while the cannons roar from one day's end to another, so you see we have active work all of the time. We have lost half of our Company on the 19[th] of this month between the hours of six and seven. We had ten killed and twenty five wounded in our Co. Oh, I should like to hear from home first rate now. Do write to me. Send me some postage stamps and a fine comb if you please. Now I am a going to send this with Mahala's. We have got the advantage of the Rebs and are a going to keep it. I think before next winter this Rebellion will close. Oh! I hope so. Now I trust in God. I want you all to pray for me. I want you to write me all of the news. I would like to hear something about my bounty. As soon as I can get my discharge I can get seventy five dollars more State Bounty. I have got to send to the Paymaster General of N.Y. Now I should like to see you all first rate. Good by for this time friends.

Your ever loving Son and Brother,

O.R.C. to you all.

Orlando R. Chamberlin (also spelled Chamberlain) was 18 years old when he enlisted on May 18, 1861, at Addison, N.Y., as a private, and was mustered into Co. E, 34th New York Infantry. He was promoted to corporal, but the exact date is unknown. He was wounded in action on September 17, 1862, in the battle of Antietam, and discharged as a result of his wounds on April 20, 1863. After a time convalescing at home, he re-enlisted and on December 28, 1863, he became a member of the 14th New York Heavy Artillery. He was captured on July 30, 1864, in the battle of the Crater, at Petersburg, Va., and confined in Danville Prison. He was paroled and mustered out of the Union Army on May 29, 1865, at Elmira, N.Y.

The 34th New York Infantry, were known as "The Herkimer Regiment," and they served in the 2nd Corps, Army of the Potomac. They saw action at Yorktown; at Fair Oaks, where they lost 97 men, killed, wounded and missing; they lost heavily in the 7 Days Battles; at Antietam, they lost 154 men, killed, wounded, and missing; and they also fought at Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville.

The 14th New York Heavy Artillery saw action in the battles of the Wilderness, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, and Petersburg.

Dear Sister,

I now take my pen in hand to write a few lines to you. I am quite well and hope you are the same. I am glad to hear that you are getting better. How does the baby grow? There was quite a fight up to the front last night. I was on guard and had a chance to see the shells go through the air. We can't see them in the day time. There is a mortar battery a short distance from here and it was a grand sight to see a dozen shells in the air at once, and see them burst. They have been firing all day about one shot in two minutes. We have good times here now. We draw good rations and cook them ourselves. I can get you a nice ring as soon as we are paid off. I want you to send me a paper once in awhile. I have got to go on guard at four o'clock and I cannot write any more this time.

Dear Parents,

Your letter of the 27th came to hand this morning and so did the box. I have not opened it yet, but will before I close this letter. I got a letter from Henry this morning. He says he has got my watch but I suppose you have got it before this time. We are in bomb proofs. Yesterday afternoon we had some mortar practice. We threw 10 inch shells and the Rebs threw the same. They are most as big as a water pail and make as much noise as them cannon in the Armory in Bristol do. They dropped one in the fort where we are but did not hurt any one. When we was relieving the 2nd Corps they threw a shell and killed a Lieut. Col. and 3 men. Our mortars are firing now. I can't write any more as I have got to dodge shells for the Rebs will commence firing at us. When the mortar battery fires at the Rebs, they begin to shell. Write soon. I will write again.

Dear Sister,

I received a letter from you several days ago and now take this opportunity to write a few lines in return. I am well and hope that you are the same. We are in camp at present in a very pleasant place. We were not in the last fight but came here to City Point. We belong to the reserve artillery now. It is commanded by Major Miller. We were all turned out last night and six of our men were mounted and sent up to headquarters where they were joined by some more men and they went on a scouting expedition and got back at sunrise this morning. They did not see any Rebs. We had a mounted inspection this forenoon. I got a letter from father and mother yesterday. I was glad to hear that the children get along so well with the measles. We have sent part of our horses down to the second corps and I don't think that we shall draw any more at present if ever. There is very good news from the army. I don't believe that the Rebels can hold out much longer. I guess that the boys will not have to stay out here much longer. There is a report that the President is dead, but I do not believe that it is so. I hope it is not. I have written to Ellen some time ago. I cannot think of any more at present. Dear Father and Mother

I will write you a few lines to let you know that I am well and hope these few lines will find you the same. I received your kind letter this morning and was very glad to hear from you and hear that you are all well.

We have moved about 4 mls North of where we was when I wrote before. We are engaged every day and night building breastworks. I was on guard 24 hours then was detailed to work all night. I went but I didn't shovel but little you better believe. We are strongly fortified here. We expect a hard fight soon. It can't come off too soon to suit me.

It is Sunday today. We have just been on inspection of arms. It is very warm out here now-a-days. The boys are most all gone in my Company that I used to be acquainted with. There aint only 9 guns to stack.

O. R. Nickles (probably Nichols) is here. He and I tent together. He sends his best respects to you, Father.

Now, Father, I don't want you should worry about me for it won't do any good. I am contented here and think I shall come home again sometime, perhaps before long.

Dear Mother

I must write a few lines to you. I don't want you should worrie about me and make yourself sick. I think I shall come home again before a great while and I want to find you well and enjoying good health. I know how you feel but it is no use to worrie yourself about it.

I don't think of much more this time so I must close by wishing you all good health and prosperity.

Please write soon as convenient.

This from your son

Gustavus Gould
To his Father and Mother

I expect to be payed in a few days and I will send you some money. How do you get along with your work?

Thomas J. Milner, M. D., a prominent physician and surgeon at Greenville, is a native of Kentucky, born in Fulton county, December 7, 1846. He entered the Confederate service at the age of seventeen years, enlisting in the fall of 1863 in Company I, Twelfth regiment Kentucky cavalry. His company was commanded by Capt. Noah Davis, who was killed at the battle of Brice's Cross Roads, and his colonel was William Faulkner, who was killed by his own men at Dresden, Tenn. The regiment formed part of General Lyon's brigade of Gen. Abraham Buford's division, N. B. Forrest's cavalry corps, and was distinguished on many memorable fields on which the genius of Nathan Bedford Forrest led his men to victory. Private Milner took part in the fights at Paducah, Fort Pillow, Brice's Cross Roads, Guntown, and other engagements of less fame, and in the winter of 1864 shared in the engagements of his command under General Forrest as they led the way for General Hood's army into Tennessee, besieged Murfreesboro, and covered the rear of the army on the disastrous retreat. Finally he surrendered at Paducah in April, 1865, and was held there as a prisoner until the following August. Returning home in his nineteenth year with a worthy record as a Confederate soldier, he devoted himself to completing his education, attended the agricultural and mechanical college at Lexington two years, and in 1875 was graduated at the Louisville medical college. After taking an additional course in the Kentucky school of medicine and obtaining a degree he made his home at Greenville in 1881. He is health officer of Hunt county, and local surgeon of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad, and is a member of the North Texas and State medical associations and of the International association of railway surgeons. Dr. Milner was married in 1880 to Mary Baker, of Texas, and they have two daughters, Marcus and Myrtle.

William Henry Mims, of Laredo, was born in Tippah county, Miss., in December, 1840, and was reared at Columbus, Ga., where he was a member for five years previous to 1861 of the City Light Guards, Capt. Peyton H. Colquitt commanding, a famous volunteer company of that city. Early in 1861 he set out on a three years' cruise of the Mediterranean sea, and had reached Havana when news was brought to that port of the opening of war between the North and South. Returning at once on the steamer that brought the intelligence, he reached Columbus, Ga., and on May 6, 1861, set out for Virginia with ten recruits to join his company, which, on April 20th, had been forwarded to Norfolk. There he went on duty at once in the Confederate service, and while yet in that vicinity participated in the defense of Sewell's Point on May 19, 1861, and witnessed the battle between the Merrimac and Monitor. His company became Company A of the Second independent Georgia battalion, and was attached to Gen. A. R. Wright's brigade, Anderson's division, A. P. Hill's corps, army of Northern Virginia, and served as a reserve at the battle of Seven Pines, was under Stonewall Jackson in the Seven Days' battles before Richmond and afterward fought at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, and Second Cold Harbor. During the fighting before Richmond, on Aug. 16, 1864, he was captured at the battle of Deep Bottom, and sent as a prisoner of war to Point Lookout, Md., where he was held until February 16, 1865. During this time and after his parole he enjoyed the friendship of his fellow-prisoner, the famous Georgia poet, Sidney Lanier. During the two last months of his imprisonment Mr. Mims was given duties of a clerical nature by the Federal officers, at whose hands he received many courtesies and kindnesses. On February 16, 1865, he was taken to the Confederate lines and paroled, and before he could be exchanged the war came to an end. Mr. Mims resided in Alabama and Tennessee until 1883, serving for some time as treasurer of the Alabama Great Southern railroad. Coming to Texas in that year, on account of failing health, he has made his home at Laredo since 1889, and is now one of the leading citizens of that place. He is associated with his comrades as a member of Santos Benavides camp, United Confederate veterans.
