The New Post Office at Washington, D. C., adjoins the Union Station. It is the model Post Office of America. The immense work room occupying the center of the first floor is a maze of mechanism, belts, conveyors and chutes with sorting cases and files in between. Incoming mail is conveyed directly from the trains on electric trucks. It is then thrown on to other conveyors which rush it away to sorting tables and it is so arranged that a piece of mail entering or leaving the office cannot retrace its course. It is built of white granite. Cost $3,000,000.00.
