Experiments were made by the Irish Post Office in April, 1933 in the production and issued of continuous coil rolls, all were vertical. The 1d Map was the first issued and the two perforations, one on each side just below the top horizontal perforations, were to act as guide holes in a new vending machine. However, the machine was unsuccessful but the continuous printing process was deemed successful enough so that a second experimental printing was made sometime in July, 1934. This stamp was Coil 15 x imperf. with no vertical perforations (Scott #87).
