BROKEN HAT

Columbus in sight of land from the deck of the Santa Maria, as pictured by artist William Powell. Columbus' face is clean-shaven.

Columbus landing at San Salvador in the Bahamas in 1492. The scene is one day after that on the 1c value, now he has a full beard!

The Santa Maria, Columbus' flagship, was copied from an engraving by a Spanish historian-artist and is recognized to be an exact replica.

The entire fleet of Columbus was an imposing sight in 1492, but all three ships could be put on the deck of any modern-day luxury ocean liner.

Columbus, at the Court of Spain, begs Queen Isabella to finance his courageous trip to the Indies, by contributing her precious jewels.

Columbus is welcomed in Barcelona after his discovery of America. The greatest hero of his day, he was received with pomp and honor.

Though undermined by political foes, Columbus regained the favor of Queen Isabella when she learned the truth about the attacks on him.

As a gift, Columbus offered a group of American Indians to Isabella. The Indians were taken to the Cathedral where they were baptized.

COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

The platform where Columbus told of his discoveries and presented the Indians may still be seen as part of the Cathedral in Barcelona.

Columbus shown at the Monastery of Rabida explaining his radical theory of a round world. The first dog is pictured on a stamp design.

Queen Isabella recalled Columbus to Barcelona to reconsider the financing of his intended expedition to find a new route to the Indies.

Faced with a Treasury deficit, Queen Isabella pawned her jewels to buy the necessary ships and supplies for Columbus' westward voyage.

Powerful political enemies, who envied Columbus' popularity with the Queen, were successful in having him chained and imprisoned.

After his third trip to America, Columbus proudly returned to Spain. Here, he astounded the Spanish Court with tales of his new discoveries.

This picture of Queen Isabella and Columbus represents the first time a U.S. stamp carried the portrait either of a queen or a non-citizen.

The cast reproduced as the central design was taken from a commemorative half-dollar issued for the 1893 Columbian Exposition.
